

THAW JURY IS HANGING FIRE

Appears To Have Given The Case Very Careful Review Before Reaching A Verdict.

READ ALL THE TESTIMONY AGAIN

Were Repeatedly In The Court Room During The Day Asking For Instructions On Certain Points Which Bothered Them.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, April 11.—After their ceaseless vigil of twenty-four hours the Thaw jury looks wan and uncomfortable. The various reports that emanated from the courtroom and neighborhood of the jury room claimed that nine of the jurors stood for acquittal and three for conviction. Then came the report six to six and then the nine were reversed. The matter of reviewing the testimony appears to have caused considerable excitement at the district attorney's table as well as at the prisoner's attorneys. Mrs. Harry Thaw looked nervous and distraught and the Thaw family that were seated near her were silent except for words of encouragement that the lawyers would whisper to them. Judge Fitzgerald showed the strain the trial has been upon him and looks tired and worn. Jerome is worried and apparently did not like the continual reappearance of the jury or their request for more testimony to be read to them. The corridors show the wonderful interest being shown in the trial and are crowded with people who have been in line all day. For the most part it is morbid curiosity that held them, but the overwhelming prominence of the trial has added much to the excitement of the hour. The air in the courtroom all day was one of tense excitement and the court officials stepping about quietly have only added to the excitement. All eyes have been glued upon the jury room and when the jury returned shortly after lunch for more instructions everyone thought a verdict had been reached. All night long since late yesterday afternoon, the twelve men who decided Harry Thaw's fate, were looked up in the jury room. Except for their meals and a little air they were as much virtual prisoners as was Thaw at the Tombs. At the Tombs Thaw had made no preparation for leaving. His books and articles of clothing were still in their accustomed places and he refused to talk with anyone regarding the possible outcome of the case. He encouraged his wife and brother, but was calm and collected with it all. He looked older, far older, than he did when arrested months ago and did not have the worried expression he had when brought to the Tombs prison.

WHITEHEAD OPPOSED RAISING OF SALARIES

Said He Did Not Think as Good Men Would Seek Office as at Present Time.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., April 11.—The Wisconsin legislature favors increasing the salaries of its members from $500 to $1,000 per session. The senate this morning concurred in the assembly joint resolution to this effect. Senator Whitehead opposed the measure, declaring that while the present remuneration did not recompense the members for the time and expense involved in the state service as a legislator, the state would not get better men if salary were to be doubled. He said he doubted whether the class of men secured under the doubled salary would be as good as now secured at the $500 session. The vote was 21 to 8. Senators Whitehead, Bishop, Burns, Hazelwood, Smith, Stout, Wolf and Wright voting no. A new bill was introduced in the assembly which provides that common councils may do work with day labor when no bids for contracts are received. Burke introduced a resolution calling for an interstate conference including the governors and three legislators of each state, to bring about a uniformity of legislation.

Lovejoy of New York, assistant secretary of the National Child Labor committee, and other speakers were heard.

Judge Fitzgerald arrived at 10:21 a. m. and the courtroom doors were not opened to the general public. At 10:45 the jury sent for a number of exhibits in the case. They also requested the testimony of a number of witnesses, who testified in behalf of the people, to be read to them.

Grants Request.
Judge Fitzgerald granted the request and at 11:05 the jury had read to them the testimony of Meyer Cohen. The testimony of Henry F. Blaise, who also was an eye-witness to the killing, was also read to the jury, and the cross-examination of Doorman Barry was read.

Evelyn's Testimony
Evelyn Thaw's testimony was read to the Thaw jury and that portion of the judge's charge relating to insanity was next read. The jury then retired to the jury room for luncheon at 1:30.

More Testimony
Testimony of Policeman Thomas P. Lynch was also read. The action of the jury in asking for the particular exhibits and testimony led to much speculation as to what trend their long discussion had been.

Difference Exists
It is generally conceded serious differences of opinion had developed and some of the jurors are doubtful as to the evidence. A verdict of any sort is still thought to be remote. The best Thaw's counsel expect is a disagreement.

Back Again.
At 3:10 the jury came into the courtroom and are awaiting Judge Fitzgerald's arrival. He has now returned from luncheon. It is said they want more testimony read to them.

Want Re-Reading.
The jury asked for re-reading of the judge's instructions regarding the defense's alibi.

Back to Jury Room
The jury again retired at 3:29 and Jerome and Thaw's counsel expressed an opinion that a verdict of some sort will be returned soon.

Mrs. Holman's Pica
Pittsburg, Pa., April 11.—No matter how cruel Harry Thaw and Evelyn have been to me, I would like to see the jury acquit the defendant, and soon, for the sake of my daughter and what it means to her peace of mind.

This is the statement made by Mrs. Charles Holman, mother of Mrs. Harry K. Thaw, after strenuous eighteen hours of anxiety awaiting the return of the Thaw jury.

ANTI-ROOSEVELT FIGHT IS OPENED BY FORAKER AT CANTON LAST NIGHT

Opposition To Roosevelt And His Personal Choice For Presidential Nominee Clearly Defined.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Canton, Ohio, April 11.—In his speech here last night Senator Foraker fired the opening gun of the anti-Roosevelt, anti-Taft campaign of nineteen eight. He states he is not at war with Roosevelt, denies the charges he is party to any conspiracy, calling the story of such an act as mischief making pipe dreams. He touched upon the rate bill, calling it a faulty measure and bitterly deplored the discharge of the colored troops. The speech will be taken as the line of attack which will be made upon Roosevelt during the next two years and coming from Foraker means much. Referring to recent news stories in which he was pictured as being in a conspiracy to discredit the administration in return for which political oblivion was to be his punishment, he declared the reports to be the mischievous pipe-dream of an over-ambitious correspondent. He said that he knew his alleged co-conspirators only casually, and had never communicated with them directly or indirectly on any matters to the conspiracy as alleged.

As for the threats which, it was reported, were to follow should he further attack the policies of the White House, the senator said he did not believe any such threats were made and even if they were he would pay no attention to them.

Was Not at War With President.

He was not at war with the president—the busiest president we ever had, he added. During the six years of the present administration in which the president has been constantly doing or causing to be done something of great importance in foreign, as in domestic affairs, he, as senator from Ohio, supported all his proposed legislation except three measures—the statehood bill, the Hepburn bill

THE ENLARGED CARNEGIE INSTITUTE DEDICATED

Wise Men Of The World Assembled For Exercises That Mark Steel King's Crowning Triumph.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Pittsburg, Pa., April 11.—In the presence of a gathering that was literally representative of the wise men of the world there was carried out today a program of impressive exercises marking the first day of the dedication of the rebuilt Carnegie Institute.

No more notable gathering of learned men has ever been seen in this country than that which filled the grand foyer of the Carnegie music hall this morning to receive the greeting of Mayor George W. Guthrie, who welcomed the distinguished visitors. In behalf of the city of Pittsburg, Statesmen and diplomats, scientists and educators, artists and authors, from all parts of America and from across the seas, were among the guests.

Among the distinguished Europeans whose world-wide fame naturally made them the centers of much attention were William T. Stead, the English editor and reformer; Sir Robert S. Ball, professor of astronomy at Cambridge university; Leon Benoite, director of the Luxembourg gallery, Paris; Prof. Marcelin Boule, director of the Paris Museum of Natural History; Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, member of the French senate; Sir Robert Cranston, lord provost of Edinburgh; Theophile Delcasse, French foreign minister; Baron Des

MAJOR LEAGUES BEGIN PLAYING BALL TODAY

Eastern Members Of Both National And American Organizations Will Try To Wrest Honors From West.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, April 11.—All indications point to aggressive and well-contested campaigns of the American and National baseball leagues, the opening games of which take place today. Every move which will be made on the playing field this summer will be with a purpose by each team, but especially among the eastern organizations, to beat the leaders at any cost. Conditions have so shaped themselves by the victory of the two clubs of Chicago last fall, one in the American league, the other in the National league, and the ultimate victory of the American league team over that of the National league for the world's championship, that all of the baseball energy and intelligence of the east is to be thrown into a struggle to wrest supremacy in the national sport from the west.

In both leagues, from the champion Chicago down to the tail-end Bostonians, all the teams apparently have been materially strengthened. The Giants have shaken up their infield with the hope that they may cut off some of those "chop-grounds" which were being batted by the Chicago Nationals last year in close games. The Highlanders have added pitchers who

CHILE IS ANGRY; SULKING BECAUSE OF THE DECISION

Wanted To Have An Ambassador From The United States And To Send One.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, D. C., April 11.—In spite of Secretary Root's recent visit, in spite of Andrew Carnegie's gift of several hundred thousands of dollars for the building of a peace palace for the Bureau of American Republics, all is not harmony between the Latin American republics and the United States. Scarcely had Secretary Root returned with words of praise for all he saw below the equator, before Nicaragua and Honduras fell out over a lowly sum and resorted to fistfights. Uncle Sam is preparing to spank them. Now it is Chile that has caused the rift in the line.

Chile is sulky. The long-drawn-out republic that takes up much of the space on the western coast of South America, believes it is entitled to a more dignified representation here in Washington than it has enjoyed in the past. Grateful under the obligation given him at Valparaiso and Santiago, Secretary Root lent a willing ear to the Chilean appeal, and prospects seemed bright that the little republic would gain its ends.

Then there was trouble. Brazil is the only South American nation that has been deemed of sufficient importance in the past to entitle it to the honors of an embassy here. When Chile strove to get into the Brazilian class there was an uproar in South America that rocked the Andes and made the mighty Amazon run backward in its channel. Cries of "caramba!" rang from peak to peak and protests piled up in Washington.

Then negotiations took a sudden drop. Secretary Root, shook off the overpowering effects of his southern trip and intimated politely and diplomatically to Chile that its requests, much as he regretted, scarcely could be complied with at this time, whereupon Chile, who had withdrawn its minister, Senor Walker-Martinez, to take part in the Pan-American conference at Rio Janeiro, showed its pique by failing either to permit him to return or to appoint a successor. As a result of the disappointment, Chile is maintaining merely a hollow show of representation, and Alberto Yocham, secretary of the legation, is twiddling his thumbs over a featureless job and wondering how long the position will last.

The disappointment, however, was

HOW WASHINGTON
JUDGES MATTERS

THE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION QUESTION BOTHERS MANY PEOPLE.

INTERESTING SIDE LIGHTS

Old Timers Are Bewildered at the Sudden Changes That Take Place in Affairs.

In view of the fact that Senator Foraker fired the opening gun in the presidential campaign at Canton last evening and that it was an anti-Roosevelt gun, the following special letter from the Gazette's correspondent in Washington will make interesting reading.

With developments in the political situation following one another so rapidly as to bewilder even the most hardened of old-time politicians it is impossible to predict what even the next twenty-four hours will bring forth.
Fortunately for the peace of mind of Washington as well as the country at large, congress is not in session and we are spared the forensic efforts of those who would surely rush to the attack or defense of the administration if the floor of the senate and house were open to them, and the benches and galleries crowded with auditors. The view of Senator Up-country or Representative Backwoods, expressed in congress are of some importance and are immediately given wide circulation. When given privately in interviews, congress being out of season, they rarely get beyond a circumscribed field, generally local.

But almost the sole topic of conversation in Washington recently has been the President's disclosure of the attempt to repudiate him by securing the nomination of some one not in accord with his policies, at the next republican convention.

With characteristic frankness the President took the public into his confidence at the most favorable opportunity. No sooner had the Harriman letter been made public property than the President handed out the correspondence which tended to show that for some reason Mr. Harriman desired to eliminate Senator Dewey from the senatorial contest. Some ascribe Mr.
Harriman's interest to a desire to succeed Mr. Dewey in the senate, and the President is said to have suspected such to be the predominating thought with the railroad magnate. However that may be, the President followed this sledgehammer blow with a long talk with the newspaper men. He called a number to the White House and discussed with the greatest freedom the combination which was organized to defeat him for the Presidential nomination in 1904. At that time the "interests" would have been around the late Senator Hanna.
His death left them without an available candidate and the renegades returned to the reservation and promised to "be good." This made people sit up and take notice and the next day the President went at it again.
This time he gave out the information that a cabal was now being formed to trot out favorite sons, the delegations, to be swung in line at the proper time for an anti-Roosevelt candidate.

The President has thus squarely outlined the issue between himself and his policies on one side, and trusts and corporate interests on the other.
"I think I will have the people with me," he said, and certainly he has grounds for the belief. No man in the history of the country ever had the people so solidly at his back as has been proven by the widespread and almost universal endorsement of his policy. The danger lies in his announced determination to retire from the field and leave his mantle to his successor, whom he frankly desires to select. No one but Secretary Taft appears to fill the bill and not all the specification fit the genial Secretary of War. Mr. Taft is a great man; of his capacity for work, of his ability, his fairness, astuteness, incorruptibil-ity and his general fitness for the highest office, no one can speak too highly. Mr. Taft lacks one quality predominant in Mr. Roosevelt, namely, aggressiveness. His bent of mind is not in that direction and yet it is that quality in Roosevelt which appeals most strongly to the American people.
They realize that with the handicaps

Of Interest to Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform, either in the way of household cares or in social duties and functions which seriously tax their strength, as well as nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating nerve. By its timely use, much serious sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeon's knife would, it is believed, seldom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The "Favorite Prescription" has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed in plain English, on every bottle-wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is absolutely free from any of the chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking place of the commonly used alcohol in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.
A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, postpaid, and absolutely free from any request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. Constipation is the cause of women's diseases. Cure the cause and you cure the disease. Easy to take as candy.

he has had it has been a tremendous task to accomplish what he has and that the results have been due almost entirely to his restless, relentless efforts. He has infused the officials of his administration from top to bottom with a resolute desire to prosecute offenders against the existing laws, and wrote them in the statute books to further restrain the encroachments of aggregated and predatory wealth. Now, with his task only fairly well begun, he sincerely wishes to relinquish the reins to a new-comer and retire to a well-earned rest. All indications point, however, to such an insistent demand on the part of the people that Mr. Roosevelt shall continue at the head of affairs, that the shrewdest observers believe he will be forced to take the nomination.
No man can resist the call which they believe will be made on him in 1908.
A nomination tendered as a sort of compliment, or one in which there was a contest, might be declined. But not, they say, one spontaneously offered by a devoted constituency. This sentiment is becoming more and more pronounced. Senator Burkett, of Nebraska, says the sentiment in his state is pronouncedly Rooseveltian. Senator Gamble, of South Dakota, says his state will hear of no one else. Ex-Senator Marion C. Butler, of North Carolina, once the great leader of the populist movement, now a Roosevelt man, declares that in his state no one but Roosevelt will do. Hundreds of others are talking the same way and with great popular feeling to back them.

In these declarations there is no effort to discredit Mr. Roosevelt's statement that he does not wish the nomination and will not accept it. This is the first time the people have differed with him on any subject but here they stand apart. He is determined not to be a candidate. They are slowly making up their minds that he "must"
and the will of the people, as Mr.
Roosevelt knows, will ultimately prevail. So much remains to be done in the way of regulating corporations. As the President has said, the good corporations have nothing to fear, but the "bad" ones are as strongly opposed to his policies today as ever. To curb them; to secure a continuation of legislation in the direction of defending the common people against their operations; to see to it that the vigorous enforcement of existing laws needs a strong hand at the helm of affairs, and that hand appears to be Roosevelt's. Mr. Bryan seems to be the choice of the democrats and it is conceded that he and Mr. Roosevelt think upon the same lines, but with a republican house, and possibly a republican senate, Mr. Bryan would be tied.

Back of the movement to discredit Roosevelt may be easily discerned the hand of Harriman, and reading between the lines of the argument of his counsel before the Interstate Commerce Commission in this city, may be seen why the great railroad magnate is so exercised. The unhorsing of Gov. Odell was a great blow to him in New York, and for this the President was responsible. Then came the forcing of the nomination of Hughes, the tireless inquisitor, who laid bare the operations of insurance high-finance methods. His nomination and election was ascribed to Mr.
Roosevelt. Now comes the investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the operations of Mr. Harriman with the Union and Southern Pacific, and the Chicago & Alton. The purpose of these investigations, as Mr.
Harriman well knows, is to determine whether cause exists for prosecution under existing laws, the ultimate intention being to compel him and his association to disgorge, and, possibly to punish them even further.

When directly asked if the watering of the Chicago & Alton was not merely a speculation, "the grasping of an opportunity," as Commissioner Clark put it, Mr. Cravath reluctantly admitted that at present such operations are looked upon with disfavor. "But you must remember," he said, in effect, "that at that time there were many such transactions and it is scarcely fair to single out one of them for condemnation." Other remarks left the impression that while such conduct in the past might have been excusable, because prevalent, in the future no such tactics would be tried. The shadow of the "big stick" is over these corporations, and the question is, will it remain there?

After his regular trade had seen the two articles side by side, where they could be handled and closely inspected, he put them in his show window, where they could be seen by everyone who passed by.

"The result of this display was so very apparent that he decided to carry on the campaign for a considerable length of time, and took in several other unsatisfactory articles from neighbors, giving them the same kind of publicity. The next visit he made to the city he went around to the mail order houses, took their catalogs and selected a number of things in his line which looked to be particularly cheap and asked to see the goods themselves.
He was allowed to inspect them, and found them exactly as expected in nearly every instance. They showed they were not of the value of goods imputed, so he made several purchases
and while at the wholesale houses bought some of the goods imputed, where there was not already plenty of them in stock. When he got home, he cut the picture and description of one of these articles out of the catalogue and put it on the article, then put the price and description on the imitated article and a big card calling attention to the difference in quality was put in the window with them. But one mail order article was used in each display, and attention was always called to the difference in value on a big window card.

MISS ROSE COGHAN
IN SHAW'S SHOCKER

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" Suppressed in New York and Kansas City, Presented Here Last Evening.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession," a play broadly dealing with phases and aspects of human life and latter-day civilization which are never mentioned in the drawing-room or the home circle, was revealed to a fair-sized audience, at the Myers theatre last evening by Rose Coghlan and her company. It is the most unconventional and daring of the several exotic dramas which have been submitted to the world by that perverse and critical Irish revolutionary, Bernard Shaw.

Visitation of the sins of the fathers (in this case also mothers) upon the children, is not a new theme, but its exposition takes on a new and sinister intent when, after parental respect, reverence for the cloth, and most of the other good old-fashioned virtues and institutions have been tossed out the back door, an effort is made to fully justify, by economic necessity, the whole course of action which must end in the blasting of the happiness and hopes of the only individuals entitled to one's sympathy. In this sense the play teaches the inexorable triumph of evil and is un-moral.
It does not even vindicate itself, morally, as a sociological study, since it points out, no hope.

Brilliant epigram and paradox abound in the lines and there are as startling dialogues and climaxes as the "shilling shocker" might afford.
Miss Coghlan gives a faithful portrayal of the unpleasant part of "Mrs.
Warren" and an excellent support in Lynn Pratt as "Sir George Crofts." Miss Lucile Stanford gives a restrained and convincing study of the girl, "Vivie Warren," and Forrest Orr is very good as the pert but likable "Frank Gardner." St. Claire Bayfield fails to make the most of his opportunities as that weak old clergyman, "the Rev. Samuel Gardner." Richard Pitman is good as "Mr. Prad."

SOME SUGGESTIONS
TO MEET A PROBLEM

How a Small Retailer May Combat With the Growing Mail Order Evil in His Home Town.

In a recent issue of the Grand Rapids Furniture Record suggestion as to how a small retailer can meet the growing evil of the mail order house is given as follows:

"A retailer in a small town, located near large mail order center, has adopted rather an unusual method of keeping the home trade from ordering from the mail order house, reports an exclusive. He was driven to this idea by circumstances and has found it on the plan long enough to see that it has been a big help to him and one thing in favor of any kind of advertising which holds trade at home is the fact that once you thoroughly convert a customer, he is not likely to again relapse into the mail order habit."

"His neighborhood several years ago had quite a mail-order craze, and its effect was pretty bad on the local dealer. This particular dealer, however, was not satisfied that it was paying anyone but the mail order house.
A good friend came in one day and told about a neighbor who had purchased some article through a catalogue, and that it was very unsatisfactory. Our dealer at once saw his opportunity, and sent word to the man to the man to bring it into the store and he would allow him the full price paid for it on a better grade which he had in stock. Upon arrival of the mail order house article, he explained to the owner that he wanted to buy it just to show the difference between a good article and an imitation, and asked to be allowed to tell where he got it. This was readily granted and the man purchased the kind of an article he had expected to get from the mail order house when he ordered, and went home well pleased that he had made a good turn of a bad bargain."

"The dealer made a couple of good big cards, one for the mail order article, giving the price it sold for, and calling attention to the difference in quality between it and the genuine, which was displayed beside it, bearing a card, giving its price, and the strong points of superiority. This attracted the attention of all customers, and a little talk with each one who mentioned it caused them to go away with a better idea of the real value of mail order purchases than the bargain counter features of their offers had been explained away. He always told them honestly that if they wanted to spend less money than good goods cost they could get cheaper qualities at the mail order house at cheaper prices, but that the quality was always handicapped, because he was selling goods to his neighbors and felt that he had to give good value."

"After his regular trade had seen
the two articles side by side, where they could be handled and closely inspected, he put them in his show window, where they could be seen by
everyone who passed by."

"The result of this display was so very apparent that he decided to carry on the campaign for a considerable length of time, and took in several other unsatisfactory articles from
neighbors, giving them the same kind
of publicity. The next visit he made to the city he went around to the mail
order houses, took their catalogs and
selected a number of things in his line
which looked to be particularly cheap
and asked to see the goods themselves.

found them exactly as expected in nearly every instance. They showed
they were not of the value of goods
imputed, so he made several purchases
and while at the wholesale houses
bought some of the goods imputed,
where there was not already plenty
of them in stock. When he got home, he cut the picture and description of
one of these articles out of the catalogue and put it on the article, then
put the price and description on the
imitated article and a big card calling attention to the difference in quality
was put in the window with them. But one mail order article was used in
each display, and attention was always
called to the difference in value on a big window card."

WITHOUT FOOD FOR FORTY-EIGHT HOURS

Arthur Ryan Escaped From County Asylum During Dance and Drifted to Chicago.

Arthur Ryan, a boy of twenty years who is confined to the Rock county hospital for the insane, has spent nearly his entire life in state institutions and has just added another to his list of odd experiences. A week ago Saturday evening, while the patients of both the insane and poor wards were enjoying a dance, young Ryan left the hall floor and passing through the dining room and kitchen escaped through a window. For an hour he was not missed and then a search was made about the buildings, grounds, and adjoining farms. All trace of the youth was lost and several days went by without news of his whereabouts.

Then came a dispatch from Chief of Police Collins of Chicago stating a young man, giving his identity as Arthur Ryan who had escaped from the Rock county farm. Superintendent Killam found Ryan in the Cottage Grove avenue police station and the boy was glad to know that he was to return to the farm. He said he wandered on foot through Janesville to Sharon and there succeeded in catching a freight for Chicago. He was not long in the Windy City when the police picked him up. During his absence from the asylum he had gone without food for two days and two nights.

Ryan's career has been largely as a ward of the state. When very young his mother died and he was sent to the orphan's home at Sparta. He was found mentally deficient and transferred to the home for the feeble-minded at Chippewa Falls. After five or six years at that institution he escaped and found his way to Beloit near where an uncle by the county fall he was examined by the county authorities and sent to Mendota. Examination at the state hospital proved him incurable and not dangerous and he was permanently placed in the county asylum. Ryan's dementia is of an idiotic nature though his face is particularly bright and there is nothing imbecile about his outward appearance.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Thursday, April 11, 1867.—Liberal Subscription.—We stated last evening that the Congregational society had purchased the lot next adjoining their present location of Rev. Hiram Foot of Waukesha, at a price of $2,300. Mr. Foot was once the pastor of the church, and has generously donated $300 of the purchase money for the erection of a new edifice for his old society.

Burglary.—The store of E. C. Jenkins and Brother was entered last night, but nothing was taken except $2 in pennies. The entrance was first effected to the basement and the door at the head of the stairs leading to the store was cut through with a chisel, sufficiently to enable the burglar to reach his hand through and shove the bolt. The chisel, which had no handle on it, was left on the counter and was found this morning when the store was opened. The job looks like that of a green horn in the thieving business. Fire/Almost.—The family of Mr. Anson Rogers were greatly startled about quarter past six this morning by discovering that the house was on fire and was threatened with rapid destruction. It appears that the boy who built the fire in the furnace, allowed some loose kindlers which lay near to become ignited, and the flames ran up and melted the lead pipe which communicated with the wood work, and for a few moments it appeared as though it would be impossible to save the building. But Mr. Rogers shut the flow of gas off and set energetically to work, calling to his aid Mr. A. C. Bates, who, minus all his clothing save shirt and pants, went to the assistance of Mr. R. and by their well-timed and persistent efforts subdued the fire. It was an exceedingly close call. The damage to the house will probably be about $150.

Before The Footlights.

Myers Theatre, Monday, April 15.—Frank Mahara's Minstrels at the Grand theatre opened to a large audience Thursday night. The performance differs in many respects from the ordinary minstrel show, in that it is not more than one-third full of ancient gags, hack numbers and alleged jokes, which usually constitute the stock in trade of the modern traveling minstrel show. The Vorne quartette, by its singing, received the warm approval of the audience. Le Roy Bland in his Indian characterization and songs was the chief attraction of the performance. John Pampin, the colored juggler, was decidedly clever. The Grand is a good place to spend a couple of hours these nights. The performance altogether constitutes a clever performance.—Salt Lake Tribune, Sept. 21, '06.

THE MAJOR LEAGUE PLAYING BALL

are supposed to be proficient in curv-ball, that they may fool the weaker batters of the Chicago Americans this summer. The Boston American league club appears to be somewhat demoralized, but efforts are being made to strengthen it. A change of ownership in the Boston National league club has to a large extent changed the personnel of the team, and it stands today it is more formidable than it was last year. Both Philadelphia league clubs have been strengthened, Brooklyn takes the field confident of winning more games from Chicago this season than last. The western clubs, on the other hand, are in excellent shape and prepared to give the east a hard tussle for honors.

With the beginning of the pennant seasons some facts and figures concerning previous races in the two big leagues, are timely. The race this year will be the thirty-eighth annual tussle of the National league and the eighth annual campaign of the American league.

Since its inception in 1876 there have been 32 cities to hold membership at one time or another in the National league and the only two that have held membership continuously since 1876. They have been in every National league race and between them have won almost as many pennants as all the other cities put together. The Bostonians in 32 years have won seven pennants and finished last but once. That once was in 1877, when there were only five clubs in the National league.

The list of cities that have been National league members is as follows: Chicago, Hartford, St. Louis, Boston, Louisville, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Providence, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Syracuse, Cleveland, Troy, Worcester, Kansas City, Washington, Pittsburgh, Brooklyn, Baltimore and New York. The circuit has ranged in size from five cities to twelve.

The cities that have been component parts of the American league in the seven years of its existence are Chicago, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Detroit, Kansas City, Cleveland, Buffalo, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Baltimore, St. Louis, Boston and New York. Boston and Philadelphia have each won the pennant twice and Chicago three times.

Tail-enders in the American league have been St. Louis, once; Milwaukee, once; Minneapolis, once; Boston, once; Baltimore, once and Washington, twice. All American league circuits have been of eight cities. In the championship percentages have been in the 600s, showing the even strength of the organization.

Only Chicago and Boston have won pennants in both leagues. Of present big league cities Cleveland, St. Louis and Washington have not won a pennant in either major organization. Washington, St. Louis and Boston are the only cities that have finished last in both the American and National leagues.

The opening games in the American league today are scheduled as follows: Chicago at St. Louis, Cleveland at Detroit, New York at Washington, and Boston at Philadelphia.

In the National league St. Louis plays at Chicago; Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, Philadelphia at New York, and Brooklyn at Boston.

The schedule of each league provides for a season of 154 games. In the American league the western clubs will close in the east on Oct. 5. In the National league the closing date is the same, with Chicago at St. Louis, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, New York at Philadelphia, and Brooklyn at Boston.

A New Reformation.

Are we in for a new reformation? Vinet, himself an evangelist, theologian, said long ago that one was necessary and inevitable, and there are features about the present upheaval which remind us curiously of that old one of high four centuries ago.—Christian World.

Taken Off Drifting Vessel by the Steamer Woermann.

Galveston, Tex., April 11.—Chief Boatswain I. Nordstrom of the United States battleship Kearsarge with eight sailors and a stowaway, who were rescued from drowning off the Florida coast last Friday night by the North German Lloyd steamer Prof. Woermann, were brought here by that vessel Wednesday. When found Nordstrom and his men were adrift off Cape Canaveral, Florida, on government coal barge No. 1 in a wild storm.

A hawser was borne to the barge from the ship, but before proceeding far it was snapped by the pitching of the boats in the angry sea. Later the men were taken off the barge by the boat's crew from the Prof. Woermann, led by her chief officer, after several hours of great exertion. The barge broke away from the naval collier Caesar on March 31.

ALL SPOKE WELL OF THE WORK

In a little conversation recently a lady said, "Dr. Richards, a queer coincidence occurred a little while ago at a party I attended."

"A number of us ladies were sitting together in the corner and we spoke of having just been to the dentist's."

"Where did you go?" one asked.

"To Dr. Richards," was the reply.

"Why, that's my dentist," said she.

"He does my work too," spoke up a third.

"Mine too," said the fourth.

"And mine," said the fifth.

And sure enough, all five ladies were patients of Dr. Richards.

"Well," said Dr. Richards, "what did they say as to my work?"

"They all liked your work and spoke well of you," she replied.

And why shouldn't they?

For no dentist takes more pains to avoid hurting than he.

No dentist does better work.

No dentist is more reasonable in his charges.

Such a combination ought to make people speak well of his work.

PUTZKUHN HEARING IN PROGRESS TODAY

Several Witnesses Testified on the Stand That Defendant Made Threats Attributed to Him.

In municipal court this morning the examination of August Putzkuhn, former signman for the C. & N. W. Ry. Co., who is charged with making threats during the month of December to shoot Engineer Ross Dunwiddie or ditch his train, was commenced by District Attorney J. L. Fisher, with John Cunningham acting as counsel for the defendant. Detectives P. H. Casey of Milwaukee and W. G. Conrath of Chicago were also on hand, along with a number of witnesses. Louis Church said that Dunwiddie had annoyed Putzkuhn by tooting his locomotive whistle derisively whenever he came by the signalman's headquarters. He testified that August had made the statement attributed to him but that he (the witness) did not believe that he meant it. Mr. Zerbel, a brother-in-law of Putzkuhn, was disinclined to believe that the latter ever got very angry—he was inclined to regard him as a good and jolly law-abiding citizen of domestic habits. August Stageman, section foreman, was another witness. A recess was taken at noon and the hearing was resumed at 2:30 this afternoon.

Shortly after three o'clock the defense placed Night Operator Anderson of the Anderson's Crossing tower on the stand as its last witness. He testified to the fact that the destruction of switch-locks and tampering with wires began about two weeks after Putzkuhn had lost his job at the tower. August Stageman, section foreman, was called back by the defense and after a question or two had been answered, the prosecution rested and Atty. Cunningham introduced a motion to have the case dismissed. After argument, Judge Finch denied the motion and the defense began to place its witnesses on the stand.

STAR WITNESS IN PULLMAN LAWSUIT

J. S. Banfield of Plattville Called on to Tell About Old Surveys—His Mining Operations.

J. S. Banfield was here today from Plattville, where he has just disposed of his laundry interests and purchased another drilling outfit. Eastern parties who are prospecting on several tracts in that vicinity have just closed a $5,000 drilling contract with him and instead of living in a tent, as has been his custom heretofore, he plans to build a 20x10 cabin on wheels which will be his habitation during the operations.

Twenty-seven years ago Mr. Banfield laid out several of the Chicago suburbs and thoroughfares, including Pullman, Englewood, and Halstead street south from the stockyards. There is a tract of land which joins the Pullman suburb on the south and through which runs a thoroughfare which the owner is trying to have closed up in order to enable him to sell the real estate to the company. The question as to whether this thoroughfare ever had any legal existence has been raised and Mr. Banfield has been called in as a witness.

By consulting his old ledgers he has been able to determine that the street was laid out in proper form and his evidence will probably have a most important bearing on the decision in the case.

SENIORS SELECTING COMMENCEMENT PLAY

Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" Will Probably Be Settled Upon.

Members of the 1907 class of the Janesville high school are now making first preparations for commencement exercises; which will be held early next June. The matter of class play has been under consideration for the past few weeks and a decision on some comedy is expected soon. The choice lies between a modern composition and Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and it is very likely that the latter will be selected. There is less work connected with the production of a latter-day piece and an audience is usually best pleased with such, but their value in a Shakespearean production. The partisans of the classic hold that the extra labor is fully compensated in the value each played receives from committing to memory and acting his or her part.

CULTIVATION OF SUGAR BEETS ON EXTENSIVE SCALE

Being Carried on at La Grande, Oregon, Under Direction of E. Sebbelov, Formerly of Janesville.

Einer Sebbelov, formerly chief agriculturist for the Rock County Sugar company and a man well known in this portion of the state, has written from La Grande, Oregon, where he is now located. He says in part:

"I am very well pleased with my position here, though I am kept busy early and late. However, I hope later to find time for the enjoyment of this beautiful country. I am in charge of the Amalgamated Sugar Company's factory and ranch at La Grande. They have similar properties at Both Ogden and Logan, Utah. At La Grande the concern owns 3,500 acres and rents 1,000 more. It has 150 horses and a stock of implements large enough for cultivating 4,000 acres.

"I hire men for all work in the field—for plowing, harrowing, and building dams and levees and digging ditches for irrigation. I traveled all over the coast, touching at Spokane, Seattle, Portland, and numerous smaller places, to secure 200 Japs for thinning and hoeing. My force of men is well in hand now and 2,000 acres have been plowed and harrowed and will be planted with beets between the fifth and tenth of April. Three hundred more acres have been prepared for grain."

"I have reconstructed the horse barns on four ranches, built two new houses for the accommodation of laborers, remodeled others, repaired the fences and taken a survey of the company's land. I worked out a plan for rotary and systematic farming and started the first plow in the Grand Round valley. Despite all the above things to delay the work I secured the irrigation record of the valley.

"The company will cultivate between 2,000 and 2,800 acres of beets and contracts for 400 more acres have been let to farmers. The company will also raise 800 acres of grain, including wheat, barley, and oats, and 500 acres of hay. I have much work to do and am in the saddle from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. many days. Besides this I have my office work to do."

Mrs. Sebbelov will arrive in a few days from St. Louis where she has been visiting friends. I know she will be pleased with the beautiful valley and the blue mountains that skirt it.

"Henry Poselt, who worked for the Rock County company for a time, is also here. He has charge of three ranches, including 1,500 acres of land."

The defendant company disclaims any liability on account of the circumstances of the horse having been loaned out to another, and so forth.

CHILE IS SULKING.

not entirely confined to Chile and its representatives. It was believed in diplomatic circles that the raising of the Chilean legation to an embassy and the sending of an ambassador to the Chilean capital, would mean a general shake-up in the United States diplomatic service, and consequently a number of promotions. It was generally conceded that the post of Chilean ambassador would have gone to Herbert G. Squiers, the present minister to Panama, for his record practically entitled him to the new berth, had it been created.

Minister Squiers, who left the army in 1891 to enter the diplomatic service, has had a stirring career. He first served in the embassy at Berlin and in 1898 was assigned to the legation at Pekin. During the siege of that city by the Boxers he was made chief of staff to Sir Claude MacDonaid, and for his services in protecting the foreign legations he was warmly thanked by the British government. From 1902 to 1905 he was minister to Cuba.

But all this does not console those who are disappointed by the hoped-for promotions in the diplomatic service. Chile is not the only one that is sulking.

George W. Vanderbilt.

George Washington Vanderbilt is described best as a capitalist and philanthropist. He is a brother of William K. Vanderbilt, and was born at New Dorp, Staten Island, New York state, on November 14, 1862. He studied under private tutors and traveled abroad a great deal while being instructed. He has given New York city its Free Circulating Library on Thirteenth street, and also erected the free Vanderbilt Art gallery. This member of the Vanderbilt family loves rural life, and has purchased an immense estate of about 100,000 acres near Asheville, S. C. where he has personally conducted the parking of the estate and the construction of an enormous mansion, stables and all the appurtenances of a great rural landlord. He spends most of his time on his North Carolina estate.

champs, Belgian minister of state; Dr. Adolph Harnack of the University of Berlin; Sir William Hughes, president of the Royal society, and the Very Rev. John Marshall Lang, principal of Aberdeen university.

The guests also included a large number of the members of the foreign diplomatic corps in Washington. The list of American guests comprised more than 200 of the most eminent educators, journalists, artists, musicians, authors, financiers, representatives of the army and navy, diplomats, statesmen, clergymen, jurists and men of science from all sections of the country.

Following the official greeting by Mayor Guthrie the European and other guests were taken on a tour of inspection of the various departments of the Carnegie Institute, including the library, art galleries, music hall and foyer, the trip concluding with an inspection of the great technical schools.

The formalities of the program were inaugurated this afternoon when the scores of visitors, many of them in cap and gown, formed in academic procession at the Schenley hotel and marched to the institute under escort of the faculty and students of the technical schools. The feature of the program of exercises was the dedication address delivered by Andrew Carnegie, whose well-directed munificence has made the great seat of learning that bears his name an accomplished fact.

Tonight, in the music hall, the guests and other friends of Carnegie Institute are to be entertained at a gala performance by the Pittsburgh orchestra. Sir Edward Elgar, the distinguished English composer, has accepted the invitation of Emil Paur to conduct one of his own compositions.

The enlarged Carnegie Institute, the dedication of which is being made such a memorable event by the attendance of notables from all parts of the world, was established originally some ten years ago by Andrew Carnegie, as a library only, his purpose being to provide for the circulation of books through large central buildings, with various branch buildings located at widely separated places in the city of Pittsburgh. On the night of the dedication of the library, when no other thought than the reading of books had come into the minds of his auditors, Mr. Carnegie announced that he had determined to establish in connection with the library a department of fine arts, a natural history museum and a school of music, and he straightway presented to his trustees $1,000,000 for these important developments. The income from that gift was so well managed that the various departments had a great growth, and the time soon came when it was necessary to have a larger building.

The library structure had cost about $1,000,000, and when the necessity of more ample space was explained to Mr. Carnegie he authorized the whole building to be dismantled and a new one to be erected at a cost of $6,000,000.

It is this new building, with its imposing facade, running 40 feet at the front of Schenley park, and extending 600 feet to the rear, that is now being dedicated with ceremonies that will continue through the remainder of the week. Under the one roof the Carnegie Institute now embraces the four departments of fine arts, natural history museum, public library, and hall of music, and in separate buildings it controls the Carnegie Technical schools, representing an aggregate cost for construction, equipment and endowment of $25,000,000.

ANTI-ROOSEVELT FIGHT OPENED and the discharge of the negro troops as a result of the Brownsville affair. Dealing at length with each of these measures Senator Foraker explained his objections to the executive recommendations. He did not approve of the effort to force joint statehood upon two unwilling territories and his objection, he believed, to be well founded. It was, however, one that assuming he felt he was expressing no personal enmity to the president.

Says Rate Bill is Unconstitutional.

The Hepburn railroad rate bill, the second note of discord between himself and the chief executive, he believed to be faulty in construction, ineffective in application and unconstitutional in purpose. Reforms of railroad abuses brought by recourse to the federal courts, were procured through the action of the Elkins law, and the Elkins law, from which no benefit had come and none was to come in the application of the Hepburn legislation. He declared that he fully expected to see that law invalidated by the United States supreme court when that tribunal was eventually appealed to on the subject.

Colored Troops Not All Guilty.

The third and most recent issue, the discharge of the colored troops, he dealt with at even greater length. He argued that upon a presumption of the guilt of a small part of three companies of soldiers, most of whom had served long and well in actual war as well as peace, the entire number was discharged in disgrace, robbed of their rewards they had earned by meritorious service. He knew they were not all guilty, he was not sure any of them were. He believed the president had been, or might have been, misinformed. Hence his demand for a hearing. The demand in part at least has furnished at least good evidence to acquit the members of the disgraced companies and has established a precedent of greater value, than the issue at stake.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

THE PLUM TREE

BY DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS
AUTHOR OF "THE COST OF THE DOLLAR" Etc.

I took Frances home, then returned, passing the swaying horror far on the other side of the road. I got the lodge-keeper, and he and I went back together. I had them, telephone from the lodge for the corner and personally saw to it that the corpse should be reported as found.

In the open woods a long distance from my place. But Granby had left a message "to the public" in his room at the hotel: "Senator Sawyer ruined me and drove me to death. I have gone to hang myself in his park. Down with monopoly!" In spite of my efforts, this was published throughout the country—though not in Fredonia. Such of the big opposition papers as were not under our control sent reporters and raked out the whole story; and it was blown up hugely and told everywhere. Our organs retold it, giving the true color and perspective; but my blundering attempt to avoid publicity had put me in too bad a light.

It was the irony of fate—my power thus ludicrously thwarted by a triviality. Within 24 hours I realized the danger to our campaign. I sent Woodruff post-haste to the widow. He gave her convincing assurances that she and her children were to be lifted from the slough of poverty into which Granby's drunkenness had thrust them. And I returned she wrote at his dictation and issued an apparently unimpaired public statement, exonerating me from all blame for her husband's reverses, and saying that he had been acting strangely for over a year, and had been insane for several months. In brief, I did everything suggested by sincere regret, and such skill at influencing public opinion as I had and commanded. But not until my reports began to show the good effects of the million dollars Woodruff put into the last week of the campaign, did I begin to hope again.

Another hope brightened toward confidence, when, on the Saturday before election, I sprang my carefully matured scheme for stiffening those of our partisans, who were wavering. The Scarborough speakers had, with powerful effect, been taunting us with our huge campaign fund, daring us to disclose its sources. On that Sunday morning, when it was too late for the opposition to discount me, I boldly threw open a set of campaign ledgers which showed that our fund was just under a million dollars, with the only large subscription, the hundred thousand dollars which I myself had given. Tens of thousands of our partisans, longing for an excuse for staying with us, returned cheering to the ranks—enough of them in the doubtful states, we believed, to restore the floating vote to its usual balance of power.

Each horse of my team had taken a turn at doing, dangerous, even menacing, threatening about; but both were now quietly pulling in the harness. Partisanship as docile as Phyllocy. The betting odds were six to five against us, but we of the "inside" began to plunge on Burbank and Howard.

CHAPTER XXV.

An Hour of Emotion.

It was after midnight of election day before we knew the result, so close were the two more important doubtful states.

Scarborough had swept the rural districts and the small towns. But we had beaten him in the cities where the machines and other purchasable organizations were powerful. His state gave him 42,000 plurality. Burbank carried his own state by less than 10,000—and in 24 years our majority there in presidential campaigns had never before been less than 40,000.

By half-past one, the whole capital city knew that Burbank had won. And they doctored and swarmed out the road to his modest "retreat," until perhaps 30,000 people were shouting, blowing horns, singing, sending up rockets and Roman candles, burning red fire, lighting bonfires in and near the grounds. I had come down from Fredonia to be in instant touch with Burbank and the whole national machine, should there arise at the last, minute necessity for bold and swift action. When Burbank finally yielded to the mob and showed himself on his porch with us, his immediate associates, about him. I for the first time unreservedly admired him. For the man inside seemed at last to swell until the presidential pose he had so long worn prematurely was filled to perfect fit. And in what he said as well as in the way he said it there was an unexpected dignity and breadth and force. "I have made him president," I thought, "and it looks as if the presidency has made him a man."

After he finished Croft spoke, and Senator Berwick of Illinois. Then rose a few calls for me. They were drowned in a chorus of hoots, toots and hisses. Burbank cast a quick glance of apprehension at me—again that hidden conviction of my vanity, this time shown in dread lest it should goad me into hating him. I smiled reassuringly at him—and I can say in all honesty that the smile came from the bottom of my heart. An hour later, as I bade him good night, I said:

Perhaps it was the unusualness of my speaking with feeling that caused the tears to start in his eyes. "Thank you, Harvey," he replied, clasping my hand in both his. "I realize now the grave responsibility. I need the help of every friend—the true help of every true friend. And I know what I owe to you just as clearly as if she were here to remind me."

I was too moved to venture a reply. Woodruff and I drove to the hotel together—the crowd hissed me whenever it recognized me. Woodruff looked first on one side then on the other, muttering at them. "The fools!" he said to me, with his abrupt, cool laugh. "Just like them, isn't it? Cheering the puppet, hissing its proprietor."

I made no answer—what did it matter? Not for Burbank's position and opportunity, as in that hour of emotion they appeared even to us who knew politics behind the scenes, not for the reality of what the sounding title of president seems to mean, would I have changed with him, would I have paid the degrading price he had paid. I preferred my own position—if I had bowed the knee, at least it was not to men. As for hisses, I saw in them a certain instinctive tribute to my power. The mob-cheers its servant, hisses its master.

"Doc," said I, "do you want to go to the senate instead of Croft?" By the flames on the torches on either side I saw his amazement. "Me?" he exclaimed. "Why, you forget I've got a past."

"I do," said I, "and so does every one else. All we know is that you've got a future."

He drew in his breath hard and leaned back into the corner where the shadow hid him. At last he said in a quiet, earnest voice: "You've given me self-respect, senator. I can only say: I'll see that you never regret it."

I was hissed roundly at the hotel entrance, between cheers for Croft and Berwick, and even for Woodruff. But I went to bed in the most cheerful humor I had known since the day Scarborough was nominated. "At any rate"—so I was thinking—"my president, with my help, will be a man."

EDITOR GRAVES' BOLD IDEA

URGES THAT BRYAN NOMINATE THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Tells Chattanooga Banqueters Democrats Should Reelect President—Reply of Nebraskan Leader.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 11.—Unusual features were developed at the banquet Wednesday night in honor of W. J. Bryan, when John Temple Graves of Atlanta, made a speech in which he declared that Mr. Bryan should nominate Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency.

After paying a glowing tribute to Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Graves said: "Speaking here deliberately, for myself, and in my fair judgment of the great majority of the plain and honest Democrats of the Empire southern state from which I came, I believe that we should put the party before the people, the principle above the man. We should rebuke the spirit of spoils and the hunger of faction. We should affirm our principles, confess our faith, recite the necessity of the reform of corporate capital as the supreme and transcendent issue of the times, pay tribute to the great and typical American who has proved himself the dauntless and conquering captain of the peoples' cause, and then in that great convention of our own, William J. Bryan, the one, unmatched and incomparable evangel of our faith, speaking for a pure Democracy, and speaking for the whole plain people of the republic, should put in nomination Theodore Roosevelt for one more undisputed term of power to finish the work he has so gloriously begun."

In beginning his address, Mr. Bryan paid his respects to Mr. Graves and what he said. He complimented Mr. Graves in the highest manner for his honesty and his boldness, and said: "As at present advised, I shall not present the name of Theodore Roosevelt to the national Democratic convention. Bear in mind, I say, 'as at present advised.'"

Mr. Bryan added that if, after mature consideration and reflection, and the presentation of the arguments in the case, he should consider that his duty lay in that direction, he would present Mr. Roosevelt's name, if it should prove the last act of his life. He then went on to say that if any Republican was to be selected by the Democrats to head their national ticket, the man should be Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin.

FIFTEEN BURNED TO DEATH.
Terrible Fire in an Apartment House in Lisbon.
Lisbon, Portugal, April 11.—A fire broke out Wednesday in an apartment house near the Central market occupied by 18 families. Fifteen persons lost their lives. Most of the bodies were terribly charred, and found only after a most difficult search. Several firemen were badly burned while looking for bodies. Among the bodies brought out from the ruins were those of a mother with her two children clasped in her arms. The police believe it to be a case of arson, and they have arrested three persons on suspicion. It is said that several tenants of the house recently took out insurance policies for sums largely in excess of the value of their goods.

King Carlos and the queen of Portugal visited the scene of the disaster.

"Such we do not sell," he said. Amundsen was astonished. "You wished to purchase one," said the man, seeing Amundsen's perplexity. Money in Bogus Pennies.

Strangely enough, the most profitable coins to counterfeit are pennies, because for an expenditure of 18 cents 100 of them can be made, which leaves a profit of 82 cents on the dollar. The chief difficulty is in getting them into circulation. It also takes expert workmanship to make these pennies, because they must be made with a die. The best counterfeiters pay most of their attention to the making of quarters, half dollars and dollars. With silver at 60 cents an ounce a counterfeit can make five quarters from every ounce, quarters that ring true and have every appearance of the real thing.—New York World.

Mixed His Quaker.

Former Representative Charles T. Cherry was telling some men at Springfield the other day of a baggage man in an Illinois town to which a number of influential Quakers were coming. The baggage man conceived the idea that if the visitors thought he, too, was a Quaker business might be helped thereby. Consequently, upon the arrival of the delegation at the station the leader was greeted by the baggage man, who solicitously asked: "Has thou the checks for thou baggage?" And yet he wondered why the Quakers smiled.

CASE OF A MAIL-ORDER BUGGY

The Purchaser Was Ashamed to Use It and Sold It to His Hired Man—It Pays to Buy at Home.

[Copyright, by Alfred C. Clark.]
The East End of London is an example of what the city does for humanity in creating poverty, misery, disease, drunkenness and crime. Jefferson was right when he said: "Great cities are great sores upon the body politic." Is it any wonder that lovers of their kind are horror-stricken at the grinding of these gigantic mills whose grist is the bodies and souls of men?

But there is another movement connected with this current setting cityward which, like it, is full of grave menace to the welfare of humanity. This is the dry rot now invading thousands of villages and towns. It is not lack of capital or business energy in the towns, or discrimination in freights or exhaustion of the soil in the surrounding country that is bringing about this change, but a new and dangerous form of competition, and the caprices of those who buy. Go into these towns and you will find them at a standstill or going backward. Inquire of their business men or commercial travelers and you will learn that business is not as good as formerly and that the prospect is for a continued shrinkage in trade.

An observant commercial traveler said to the writer: "I believe the day of the village and town is over. The big fish are everywhere eating up the little fish. A few small lines of business that cannot be done by mail, such as know that he could have bought as cheaply and selected much more satisfactorily at home. On a rural route with which I am familiar and over which most of the incoming letters are from mail order houses and the outgoing ones carry back money orders, lives a friend of mine who bought a watch from the catalogue at what he considered a rare bargain. The watch came, to be sure, but it did not go, that is at the right speed, and, although money enough was spent on it to bring the price up to a good figure, it was no better as a timekeeper than that famous watch of Capt. Cuttle's. Another friend bought a buggy at $34 and was elated over his purchase until it came and he saw that the top was a very ordinary article of oil cloth, instead of leather, and he was so ashamed of it that he sold it at a loss to his hired man and bought a better one in a neighboring town. A lady and her two daughters bought shoes from the catalogue and when asked why they had trouble with their feet said it was because of ill-fitting shoes. But such instances of the bad effects of buying 'sight unseen' are daily occurring all over the country. It is only natural and inevitable that such things should happen.

Let us see what will be the effect of this formidable diversion of trade, if carried to its logical conclusion. Nearly all the business houses of the smaller towns will become bankrupt, the value of town property will decline, churches and schools will receive a feeble support and the towns, instead of being centers of business and social activity, will almost cease to exist. The country in general will become like many portions of the south where the large plantations, by getting their supplies in the cities, have kept the neighboring towns down to the cross-roads type—dreary, unpainted little places of a half dozen ramshackle houses. The evil effects of this loss of trade and destruction of the value of town property will react upon the value of farm property by cutting off the home market. They will add to the taxes on lands by reducing taxable values in the towns. Surely it is not to the interest of anybody, except the bloated corporations carrying on the mail order business, to see the towns and villages fall into decay. A live town is not only of value to the lands surrounding it, but its well stocked business houses are a convenience and a benefit to the buyer. Even if money could, in the long run, be saved by ordering everything from the city, the inconvenience and uncertainty of it would always make such shopping unsatisfactory. Ordering from a catalogue is a leap in the dark, except in the case of a few articles whose color, shape and quality are always the same.

To the man who can soberly look on both sides of the question and who can put himself in the place of 'the other fellow' the query will come: Is it best from mere whim, or even for a certainty of saving from one to half a dozen dollars in a year to turn my back on the old, convenient ways of doing business, and to do my part toward ruining the business of my old acquaintances and friends, and of destroying the value of property in the town where my friends live?

People who patronize the cars running out to Forest Hills are familiar with Conductor Crowley, the man who wears six service stripes on his sleeve, says a writer in the Boston Herald.

On the afternoon of election day in November one of his passengers was an old man who had been imbibing enough to make him go to sleep in the corner of the car.

Just before it reached Dudley street the conductor announced with his usual rich roll of the r, "Cir-cult and Guild."

"Yer a liar! It's John B. Moran!" shouted the sleepy one, waking up suddenly.

People who patronize the cars running out to Forest Hills are familiar with Conductor Crowley, the man who wears six service stripes on his sleeve, says a writer in the Boston Herald.

On the afternoon of election day in November one of his passengers was an old man who had been imbibing enough to make him go to sleep in the corner of the car.

Just before it reached Dudley street the conductor announced with his usual rich roll of the r, "Cir-cult and Guild."

"Yer a liar! It's John B. Moran!" shouted the sleepy one, waking up suddenly.
